Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 01 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Low cloud burning away quickly leaving another fine day.

Today:
A dry and sunny morning once any fog and low cloud clears. Staying sunny and warm into the afternoon, but a little cooler and breezier on the coast. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Tonight:
Fog and low cloud once again moving inland this evening in the easterly breeze. After midnight a few showers are possible, especially over the hills where they may turn thundery. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Thursday:
Early showers will soon clear as fog and low cloud burns back to the coast to leave a fine day for many, however, an isolated thundery shower is possible. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Early showers possible Friday, then mainly dry and sunny. Largely fine Saturday and Sunday, with sunny spells, but cloudier in the east with coastal mist and fog.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.